Dear Dale Kluga,

I am writing to ask your company to participate in an important economic census of the finance company industry, which consists of all nonbank companies that supply credit or lease financing to American households and businesses. The Federal Reserve System conducts this census to collect basic information on the types and volume of financing provided by nonbank financial institutions to the U.S. economy. The results help the Federal Reserve make better-informed policy decisions affecting credit markets and are the basis for monthly, publicly released reports on the lending activities of the industry.¹

You can learn more about this census and participate by completing the short questionnaire online at www.federalreserve.gov/financecocensus. You can also participate by completing and returning the questionnaire enclosed with this letter. The answers we receive from individual companies are considered confidential and are treated accordingly. Because this census is meant to be a complete count of all finance companies in the United States, your participation is vital to ensure an accurate portrait of your industry. Even if your company does not consider itself to be a finance company, it is still important that you let us know this fact by completing the questionnaire. Participation is voluntary, but we very much hope you will take part in this important effort.

If you have questions about the census, please do not hesitate to contact us using the telephone number or e-mail address given on the cover page of the questionnaire.

Thank you for your assistance.

Sincerely yours,
